Ex-Washington City Planning Commissioner pleads guilty and sentence for tax evasion

Donn Williams, a former Planning Commissioner for Washington City, pleaded guilty to attempted failure to file a state tax return Monday.

He was ordered by the court to pay the State $20,000 in restitution--$14,844 with his plea and an additional $5,156 during his three year probation.

He was also order to complete 50 hours of community service. In addition, the judge ordered him to timely file state and federal tax returns.

The case was investigated by agents of the Tax Commissions Criminal Investigation Unit and prosecuted by the Attorney General's Office.
